

IDIOM REVIEW—LEVEL ONE FINAL

Fill in with an idiom in its appropriate form.

Tom: Hello? May I speak to Dr. Brown, please?

Receptionist: Yes, he'll talk to you _____.

Tom: Hello? Dr. Brown? I'm sorry to call so early _____, but I really had to talk to you.

Dr. Brown: What's the problem?

Tom: Well, I'm trying to _____ if I should take my wife to the hospital. Her water broke, and she is having contractions every 15 minutes!

Dr. Brown: Don't worry! You don't have to go to the hospital right now. Tell her to be calm. She must _____ her _____ so that she gets everything organized. I suggest she goes out and _____ around Carolina Park. That will help her with the contractions. Ah! Remember to be very nice to her. She's very emotional right now, so you have to _____ her _____.

Tom: I'm very excited! I hope the baby _____ my wife, especially those big, brown eyes.

Dr. Brown: Yes, I understand how you feel. I bet you feel proud that your baby _____ on such an important holiday.

Tom: Oh, yes! _____ July, the Fourth of July!

Dr. Brown: Did you _____ a name for the baby yet?

Tom: Well, we have an idea, but we haven't really decided yet.

Dr. Brown: Alright, then, I'll meet you at the hospital at 12:00.

Tom: See you _____. Bye.

Dr. Brown: No, Tom, in a few hours. Bye.

Tom: Huh?

Dr. Brown: Never mind, Tom! Come at noon. (Click)