

SINGULAR POSSESSIVE NOUNS

Directions: Read these paragraphs about a knight and a castle. While you are reading, look for ten mistakes in singular possessive nouns. Cross out each error and write the correct spelling above the word. Be careful you don't end up in the dungeon with all of the rats and lice.

A knight stood at the rivers edge looking at the castle. The knight horse stood quietly at his side. The only sound was the horses munching as it ate some grass. After a while, the knight mounted his horse and rode toward the castle.

The suns brightness made everything shine. Colored banners flew from the castles towers. The castle looked welcoming, but its stone walls were still gray and forbidding. The castles gates were open for the day. Townspeople walked in and out, going about their business. A baker bread smelled wonderful. A farmers vegetables looked ripe and ready to eat.

As the knight rode through the gates, he wondered what would happen. Would he find favor with the royal family? Would he be able to talk with the queens soldiers? Or would he be thrown into the dungeon – the dark underground rooms where the king prisoners were locked up?
